AVOIDING TAX

Britain's tax system isn't fair. Big business and wealthy individuals can often avoid paying tax – without breaking the law – because they are able to exploit the various loopholes in the system. This has to stop

The government says that cuts in public services and the welfare state have to be made because there's not enough money to go round

But the latest Wealth and Assets survey shows that the top 10% of Britons are now 500 times wealthier than the bottom 10%. Every year up to £120bn of tax goes uncollected, yet rather than tackling tax avoidance the government plans to sack 10,000 tax collectors

As a result of the governments austerity programme, we are being told to pay for the economic crisis, whilst those who caused it are still collecting their bonuses

If the rich paid their fair proportion of taxes – the cuts could be avoided. If we're all in this together – let's make sure the rich pay what they owe
